HOSTAGES SAFE, SUSPECT HELD IN U.S.

Gunman Charged With Kidnap

$6,000 Bail For Suspect

A man calling himself Rory Shane and giving his age as 19 appeared at 10:30 a.m. today in U.S. Federal Court in Seattle and was charged with kidnapping a Vancouver man, The man was arrested early this morning at the climax of a wild, international land and sea chase that followed the robbery of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in downtown Victoria. The man, identified by Canadian authorities as William Lawrence Olenik, 26, formerly of Niagara Falls, Ont., was charged with kidnapping Roger Smith of Van-couver. Bail was set at $6,000.

Desperate Flight Ends On Cold, Rolling Sea

By DOUG MacRAE

It ended at 1:36 a.m. today, in cold weather, on gently-rolling seas, half a mile from Stuart Island on the American side of Haro Strait, 19 miles and 12 hours from where it began.

I was the only newsman aboard the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Richmond when a young, blond man surrendered and climbed aboard, head down, shivering in red shirt and slacks.

He was turned over by skipper Tom Anderson to San Juan County Sheriff Eric Erickson.

Three hostages, two men and a woman, sat in the galley of the cutter, cold, shaken and relieved.

silently, glancing at the gur man and his victims. It was a chill, understated end to 12 hours of shootings high-speed car chases and hours of police stalking and hostage terror that had people across North America following every step.

BLOODLESS END But the end came with no ore bloodshed - and that was the aim of every man in the vast armada mustered to play a part in it. At about 1 p.m. Thursday a man carrying a pistol, a ban-dolier of ammunition slung over his shoulder, walked into the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Government and Yates about 1 p.m.

Nimeiry said the peace agreement had been reached after he had had an early morning meeting with Arafat, chairman of the guerrilla central committee, arranged at a rendezvous in the heart of devastated Amman in an exchange of radio messages. The Sudanese president had met with Hussein Thursday.

The king, fighting to save his throne, was deserted by his new soldier-premier, Gen, Mahamed Daoud, who left a resignation note in Cairo Thursday and disappeared from the public eye.

Hussein also faced increasing pressure from Israel, which warned Thursday night that any deal which would allow Arafat's forces to attack Jewish settlements from border areas, as they have done, in the past, would meet with fierce retaliation.

Nimeiry said he was asked by Arafat to read the stateent on his behalf calling for the ceasefire because he himself was unable to do it.

At mid-afternoon, the sloop drifted to within 100 yards of Land's End, while police with high-powered rifles waited behind trees. Smith, in a blue jacket, and the Wells couple, in yellow slickers, huddled at the rear of the sailboat. The gunman was in the cabin.

Then the sloop turned and made for Salt Spring again, settling down to drift in the middle of the channel.

RCMP Supt. Jim Nelson left the MP53 Sidney, the police command vessel, and pulled alongside the sloop in the first of three negotiating visits, during each of which he stared down the muzzle of the .45.

"I told him how the system works in North America these days," Nelson said. "Society is geared now to help people in his position. We weren't going to shoot him. I promised him a fair shake."

At the gunman's demand, Nelson peeled off his bullet-proof vest. But the hostages weren't to be released.

With Nelson's permission, Deep Cove Marina owner Henry Bird took me to the sloop, where I offered the man with the gun an op-portunity to tell his story in full to me alone if he would

"He's not interested in getting a fair deal," Smith

'It's a difficult decision," said Irving, who had been involved in several hostage cases on land but none on the

WE'LL WAIT'

'We'd be no further ahead. We'll have to wait, and hope that the talking that's been done to him will make him think. We'll wait all night."

The sailboat moved steadily across Haro Strait as darkness fell, ringed by eight vessels, all at a distance of 1,000 feet. The gunman fired twice at the Sidney when she crept too close.

The skipper of the MP43 established voice contact with the sailboat at 9:30 p.m. and radioed to the command boat that the gunman wanted a small boat to bring cigarettes and coffee. "Tell him there are no small boats in the area," answered Nelson. The message was relayed, and the MP43 backed off again.

The cutter Point Richmond joined the police flotilla as it edged into U.S. waters, Irving radioed to get permission to land Canadian police officers on the American islands if the sailboat drifted ashore.

SLOOP RINGED

Midnight came, and the police and Coast Guard boats ringed the sloop as it drifted nearer Stuart Island. Skipper George Lewis kept the Sidney directly astern of the sailboat, 1,000 feet back. City Police Detective Lou Trues-dale, a crack shot, stood on the bridge beside Lewis, his scope-mounted .308 Remington rifle in the corner, staring into the radar screen where the sloop showed as a steady blip directly ahead of the Police officers on all boats were ordered to sleep in shfts.

"It could be a long night," Nelson said. "And if it goes on tomorrow, we'll need fresh men to deal with it." Coffee was made, and half the policemen on the Sidney were

NOBODY SLEEPING

There was no coffee on the sailboat, and nobody was sleeping. Shortly after midnight, the break came, and it was the man with the gun who broke. The radio crackled, "MP53 this is MP43. We have established voice contact with the sailboat. One hostage is to be released. He will be released only to an American vessel. We have been ordered approach the sailboat. The hostage is Mr. Smith. He will be released in the small boat. All other vessels are to clear the area."

The Sidney pulled alongside the Point Richmond, and Nelson, Irving and I boarded the cutter. The Sidney and others in the flotilla moved well back.

The runabout separated from the sailboat and Smith rowed to the cutter's boarding ladder He came aboard and was led to the galley.
Smith slumped to a bench

"He's serious, deadly serious," he said, his voice shaking. "Unless he gets some kind of concession soon, someone is going to get shot." In jerky sentences, Smith told a story of a strange mutual trust that had grown through the afternoon and evening aboard the sloop. "He's kept his word with us, and I intend to keep my word to him. He put his gun down on the seat once and we could have jumped him. We didn't." GUARANTEE

Smith said first he thought the gunman would stick to his demand for an aircraft. But he might also go for a "sincere" guarantee that he "sincere" guarantee that he would be turned over to U.S. authorities if he surrendered

"Can you hear me, Rory? "He can hear you," came the response.

"Rory, I am the Canadian aboard the Coast Guard cutter Richmond. I can guarantee you will be dealt with by American authorities.
"Even if one of the Canadian ships out there takes you into custody, it must turn you over to this vessel.

LAWYER PROMISED

"You will be taken to Anacortes, where you will be provided with a lawyer. You will have to say nothing to anybody until you have spoken to a lawyer.

There was no answer from the sailboat. The cutter backed away, then closed again.

"It's your only chance, Rory. It's all you can do."

The gunman asked what would become of the bag of money he had on board, "I will give your lawyer $6,000 to be used as you see fit. I can raise tomorrow. If you believe this, throw your guns overboard."

GUNS DROPPED The gunman demanded that all other vessels in the area move farther back. They did. And the young man stood in the boat and dropped three guns into the sea. The cleanup operation was light-hearted and fast. The Sidney moved to the cutter to take the hostages to a hotel in Sidney, the Point Richmond moved off with its prisoner, and the police flotilla moved back to shore. * About half-way back, the police radio crackled again. It was a request from the MP53 to shore base, asking that a message be relayed by tele-

Horrified Staff Sees Shootings

By STEVE HUME and HUMPHRY DAVY

Minutes after a young bandit threatened to kill everyone on the premises, horrified bank staff and customers watched Thursday at noon as two Victoria policemen were gunned down at pointblank range.

"If anyone calls the cops I'll shoot everybody here because I'm already in trouble with them," the holdup man yelled at people he had herded behind the counter of the Imperial Bank of Commerce at 1301 Government Street.

Seconds later he fired a wild shot at, and missed, bewildered customer who walked into the bank in the middle of the robbery and tried to run for the open door.

Brandishing a revolver in one hand and an automatic pistol in the other, and wearing a holster and cartridge belt full of ammunition, the robber collected approxi-mately $7,000 in bills between 12:15 and 12:30 p.m.

Carrying the money in a clear plastic bag, the bandit was challenged with a drawn gun by a plain-clothes policeman who was inside the bank.

"A man that I thought was another customer standing next to me suddenly pulled a next to me suddenly pulled a gun and told the bandit to hold it right there," said Denison G. Stewart, the customer who was fired at when he stumbled into the holdup.

"Robber fired pointblank at the man and he collapsed to the floor." Moments later another

Replies But No Answers

Kierans as chief of Canada's postal services could truthfully be said to have been initiated when the right to strike was restored two years ago to the workers in that department. For the adamant demands of the post office employees backed by strike action, when placed in confrontation with the federal government's antiinflation guide line of a maximum six per cent wage increase, led to a lengthy impasse, and this put Mr. Kierans in an untenable position.

It must be recognized, of course, that Mr. Kierans was not directly involved in the negotiations: it was the job of the Treasury Department to settle with the government employees. But as head of the postal service he was identified in the public mind with the difficulties, and certainly the employees registered protests against some of his policies. The "post office problem" inevitably became Mr. Kierans' problem, and as captain of the ship he had to bear responsibility for much of the predicament.

The negotiators could carry out the government's wage policy, but thereby precipitate a total strike in the country's essential mail services. Or they could accede to the workers' demands, and thereby break the government's policy, set a highwage precedent for other public and private negotiations pending or still under way, and in a sense betray

THE FALL OF MR. ERIC negotiators who had already concluded agreements more or less recognizing the guide line. In this dilemma there was rising public indignation at the one-day nuisance strikes which were called at various points throughout the country, Mr. Kierans' retaliation - to close post offices which depended for most of their business on nearby struck offices - was as much a hardship for the public as for the recalcitrant employees. The eventual settlement did not reach either extreme, but the damage had been done.

> The whole round of impediments, too, came on the heels of economies which Mr. Kierans, faced with mounting costs, had ordered in the nation-wide utility. Curtailed services added to public impatience. In a situation in which apparently no answer could be right, Mr. Keirans' image was bound to suffer - and it did. Perhaps another man might have come up with an acceptable solution to the problem, but that is debatable.

> In any case, the incumbent had to go, and it is not surprising that apparently he goes willingly. Whether Mr. Cote will be able to improve on the situation remains to be seen. Presumably his appointment will assuage feelings among the postal workers. And it is to be expected that Parliament will ease Mr. Cote's task by changing the ground rules sufficiently to ensure that the nation's essential communication service will not again be held to ransom.

FOR MANY YEARS CANADA was in the uncomfortable position of having to abstain on United Nations votes designed to promote world population control. The fact was that dissemination of birth control information remained illegal in Canada until a Criminal Code amendment was enacted by Parliament in 1969. Successive Canadian governments have been only too aware of the inconsistencies involved in promoting birth control abroad while it was illegal at home.

Last week the federal government announced a domestic program of research, training and public information in family planning. The same program will also be offered to international aid programs. While such programs are long overdue for faces special problems in regard to tions marked time.

government-supported family planning. Canada has no state religion but more than eight million Canadians professed the Catholic faith in the 1961 census. This is more than double the number of any other religious denomination in Canada.

Not wishing to offend any Canadian's religious sensibilities, Health Minister John Munro has stressed that family planning information will be available domestically on a strictly voluntary basis. But the urgency of the world population crisis prompted this government to act where other Canadian governments were content to avoid the issue. In an age when religion may have less influence on personal decisions, it could foreign countries under Canada's argued that dissemination of birth control information is a non-issue. dressmaker who had recounted in her pugnacious Irish way what she knew of businessman George Clinton Duke and what had happened, as she saw it, after she decided to take Mr. Duke to court for holding a gun at her head in the middle of the night.

It was Mrs. Citron's claim that Clinton Duke had special influence with the police, that he was mixed up with gangsters in the Hamilton area, and that she had been told of these things by her friend and confidante, Mrs. Bonnie Duke, who she said lived in fear of her life because of her husband's behavior.

Now it was Mrs. Duke's turn as a vitness and for the next seven hours she was compelled to reveal intimate details of her marital hell with George Clinton Duke.

She was a widow with two children she said, when she married him in 1945 after he returned to Hamilton from serving part of a 30-year sentence for armed obbery in the United States. He had been the leader of a gang which had relieved a dinner party of New York socialities of jewels worth $400,000, most of which were never recovered.

Happy Start

Together they started a lawn equipment business because a previous investment had turned sour and they had been left with a lot of lawnmowers which Mr. Duke had to sell. They worked very hard at it and built it up into the biggest in Canada. They had a good married life and she was proud of her husband.

But sometime in the mid-sixties, Clinton Duke's whole pattern of living began to change. He was a completely different man when he was drinking, she said, and when he drank he would beat her. The police advised her to lay a charge against him, but she never did, apparently concerned that his criminal record would then come out and his reputation in the community as respectable businessman would be

He started coming home late and never coming home at all, and when she asked where he had been, he wouldn't tell her. She heard he was running around with women and she hired a private detective who discovered he was meeting a Mrs. Marion Phillips Hamilton apartment. On Aug. 31 of last year, her husband and Mrs. Phillips went out of town together and she went to see Mr Phillips about it, getting nowhere, It was the weekend, she recalled in a small, quiet voice, of her 24th wedding anniversary.

Feared for Life

There was more, much more - all great copy for the newspapers. But what did it have to do with the purpose of the public inquiry? Very, very little. Mrs. Bonnie Duke was put through this ordeal simply to explain why, in July of 1968, she had gone to Police Chief Leonard Lawrence of Hamilton after twice seeing two notorious personalities, John Papalia and Donald "Red" Le Barre, with her husband in his office at the lawn equipment plant. She had associated her husband's late nights and disappearances with these visits and was so concerned she finally admitted, that she feared for

So to that extent it may be said the invasion of Mrs. Duke's privacy was justified. Yet it is a weak argument, because it was totally unnecessary. What the inquiry must establish, among other things, is whether Clinton Duke had any dealings with Papalia and Le Barre and,

FOR days the public inquiry into the if so, what was the nature of them. One Duke affair had been wandering piece of apparently solid evidence that he did is the fact of Mrs. Duke's interview with Chief Lawrence; he, of course, made notes and a record of some kind. The proper procedure, surely, would be to have Chief Lawrence testify as to what she had told him and then have Mrs. Duke explain, if explanation was considered necessary, what her state of mind was at the time.

> J. J. Robinette, the big-name lawyer who is counsel for the inquiry, has decided, however, on a quite a different strategy. By beginning his parade of witnesses with Mrs. Elizabeth Citron and ending (he expects) with Mr. Duke, he is following the adversary method of presenting evidence which, while proper enough for the criminal and civil courts is entirely inappropriate for a public inquiry and hurtful to those involved.

The difference is that hearsay evidence is permitted at a public inquiry, and a flexibility of procedure allowed, which would never be tolerated in criminal or civil law proceedings. In a criminal case, for example, a wife may not even be called as a witness against her husband. No doubt looser rules are a necessary evil in public inquiries, but great care must be taken that they do not become a vehicle for community gossip or a weapon for the invasion of personal privacy.

It has been contended by some that the best protection is to conduct the inquiry in camera and issue a public report, but this is hardly a politically feasible solution. A practical compromise, however, is to investigate in private and hear in public only that evidence which investigation shows to be relevant to the issue, rather than the present kitchen sink method in which the decision as to what is relevant or irrelevant is made after it has all been put on the public record.

This requires, of course, that commissioners appointed to conduct such inquiries be more detectives than judges. Since such commissioners are almost invariably judges, it is not a role which comes easily to them. Conversely, it explains why public inquiries so closely resemble a court of law — without all the protections for individual rights a court of law affords.

Camping Facilities

Having packed and pitched tents over the years from the Fraser Valley to the Valley of the Nass and from the Pacific to the prairies, I feel competent to throw in my two-bits worth regarding the situation of campers in the parks, as so ably outlined by your writer, Ab Kent. I am impelled to do so by the opening es in Mr. Kent's story: "Last week a California visitor wheeled his camper into Goldstream Park looking for an overnight stay in the company of other mobile folk. He spent the night in a field." As he had a "camper truck" presumably a self-contained living unit, why should he require more than a parking space in a field? I should have thought that this would have been more of a change from civilization, and that's what campers are supposed to be seeking, than being jam-packed amongst vehicles in a park.

I recall once in the mid-sixties when we were camped in our favourite campsite, Beaumont Park on Fraser Lake, west of Vanderhoof, an American camper truck towing a trailer, pulled into space nearby and occupied sites allocated for two tents, with two tables and two fireplaces. The occupants did not use any of the facilities, they sat in the trailer listening to the radio. Meanwhile car after car of families with tents in car-top carriers, drove by looking for a place to camp. The trailer could have pulled off the road and parked almost anywhere alongside Highway 16. The B.C. Parks Branch does a good job in providing park campsites, giving families an opportunity to escape from the streets and enjoy an outdoor holiday in a natural setting. Trailers and camper trucks should be banned from such campsites; they do not constitute camping. If private enterprise can see fit to provide them with either a simple parking space, or an elaborate site fitted with electricity, showers and sewer outlets, that's fine but they should not expect such service free from the Government.

In Victoria the situation is unique. People do not come here to commune with nature. They come either to see the city or are attracted by the sea, particularly prairie visitors. Yet there appear to be no campsites by the sea. "One of the Boys in the Bunkhouse."

Calling Canada Back to the IMF Fold

ANADA and Britain have special in-Carriers in the cautious re-examination international system taking place this week. The 116 member-countries of the International Monetary Fund are holding their annual meeting in Copenhagen. And the "exc h ange-rate controversy," or "flexibility," will be on everyone's lips, in official meetings but more so behind the

What is at stake in the long run is nothing less than the underpinning of international monetary exchange, acquestion since it was established after the war. This is the system of exchange rates, fixed in relation to the U.S. dollar, widely credited with maintaining postwar financial stability and, therefore, prosperity.

But lately the movement against tving everything to the U.S. dollar has gathered considerable force and intellectual respectability.

Canada is the prodigal son in Copenhagen, having officially violated IMF law by the present transitional float of the dollar as a means to a more realistic rate for pegging to the U.S. dollar. But Canada also has more experience than other IMF members in floating, considering the 11-year float from 1950 to 1961.

The fund is pressing Canada to return to the fold, not so much because of the Canadian experience itself, but for the example. Germany, Italy, Japan and Switzerland all might be tempted to unpeg their currencies. And if they did, so much for the system of fixed parities... This explains pressure being brought against Canada by the IMF this week to name the day of our return. In Britain a trend of thinking has developed out of the success of the 1967 devaluation. For years the strength of the balance of payments has been preached by politicians as if it were, like winning a war, the salvation of the country, requiring exceptional sacrifices. Then along came respected economists bearing the appealing message that the balance of payments crises need not have been, that they were the result of an artificially high exchange rate. First Samuel Brittan, the economic editor of the Financial Times of London, cultivated the ground. His book, The Price of Economic Freedom, argued that the IMF system prevented adjustments to the exchange rate in time to correct serious imbalances in the accounts.

Enter Professor Milton Friedman, the Chicago economist, with much fanfare. Mr. Friedman's message was disarmingly simple: "I'd float the pound." He said floating has become associated with crises and instability because "when things get desperate there's nothing else to do. But that doesn't mean floating is wrong." On the contrary floating the pound and instructing the central bank to keep a steady growth of money supply was his recommendation for stability.

As long as Britain followed a fixed rate, it would have to be an economic satellite of the United States, with monetary policy made in Washington. He thought the United States government had been very successful in its fight against inflation. The recession had turned out to be milder than he had anticipated. And interest rates showed signs of coming down at long last. But if he were British, he left no doubt, he would prefer the wisdom of Whitehall to Washington.

Self-Important

Part of the problem was, of course the bankers themselves. They should all stay home. Of course they couldn't see his argument. They couldn't see the trees for the forest. They were impressed with their own importance. And, indeed, given the system of fixed rates, what they were doing was important.

One of Mr. Brittan's colleagues on the Financial Times suggested the Friedman appeal lay in his backing of the individual against the state and in the coherence of his arguments. For an economist, he is exceptionally witty and interesting to hear. After 25 years of unsuccessful attempts to solve problems by the Keynesian god of fiscal manipulation, here was a man with an entirely new approach who says: "This is the way the world works," and: "These are the laws of the market.'

So far the Brittans and the Friedmans are not exactly enjoying a free passage here or in Copenhagen. Harold Lever, former Labor Treasury Minister, argued that floating would not exempt a country from exchange pressures. Economic decision, constrained by the fixed rate, would also be constrained by the amount Britain would be prepared to see her exchange rate decline. Pierre Paul Schweitzer, head of IMF, made it clear that ambitious schemes for reform are out, but some proposals for minor adjustments will be studied during the coming year. But Mr. Brittan professed to be heartened by what has been happening.

The annual report, while affirming the system of fixed rates, said that stability did not mean rigidity. It stressed the need for prompt action by advanced at the countries suffering from wrongly valued meeting of the currencies, and the use of exchange rates as a normal weapon of policy. "If these sentiments are applied in practice," Mr. Brittan wrote, "we shall be more than half way to a flexible, although not a floating world, for all the brave words about the basic system remaining unchanged."

Quebec New Arena for Medicare Battle

MONTREAL - During the past five years, Claude Castonguay has quietly drawn up plans for a revolution in Quebec's obsolete health

And throughout those five years, Dr. Raymond Robillard has fought a skillful rearguard action against those plans, which he regards as a serious threat to the medical profession

A showdown between them appears inevitable in the next few weeks.

The outcome could have repercusions across Canada. Medical spokesmen in various provinces have already voiced fears that their governments may copy some of the Quebec changes to bring galloping health costs under control.

As Minister of Health and Welfare in the Bourassa Cabinet, armed with a $1.5billion budget, Mr. Castonguay finds himself in a position to implement his own royal commission report. For a start, he wants to introduce (preferably on Oct. 1) the unique medicare plan that his royal commission devised three years ago.

A Mandate

As president of the Quebec Federation of Medical Specialists, Robillard has a mandate from his 4,000 members to call a strike or boycott if necessary to block the medicare act in its present form. He can expect strong support from the Canadian Medical Association and the powerful foreign-owned pharmaceutical industry based in Montreal, in a crunch.

The two protagonists are about the same age, both cool and cagey tacticians. Both can claim expert knowledge of the health field and administrative competence. Both have been university lecturers.

Unlike the principals in the 1962 Saskatchewan doctors' strike, they have deliberately low. Their public utterances usually fall in the sweetly reasonable category, even though insiders say they dislike each other heartily

Castonguay, a 41-year-old actuary and former consultant to insurance companies, has said very little about his department's negotiations with four professional groups since the Nasional groups since the rea-tional Assembly passed his medicare bill two months ago. He talks vaguely about pro gress being made at the bargaining table.

Robillard, 43-year-old chief neurologist at Maisonneuve Hospital, shuns the word "strike" and ducks questions about medical fees. He says principles are at issue, not

'Safety Valve'

"We do not seek to wreck or to ruin the medicare plan, but to afford a safety valve to do it," he says. Specialists will fight for the right to opt out of the plan, but he feels certain 98 per cent of them will join the plan once they have secured certain amendments. He worries over who will sit on which committee.

It sounds simple. The casual observer gets impression that if only the stopped fussing over technica details medicare could start

In fact, the bargaining-table jargon about opting out and control of "medicare acts" obscures disagreements over fundamental issues. The Que-bec Government and the specialists have pursued conflicting objectives since 1965. They have fought a series of skirmishes, with the doctors usually coming out on top.

Two new publications reveal just how far apart they have drifted.

Robillard sets out the specialists' case in a breezy 126 page paperpack published last month (Les Medecins, l'Etat et Vous!, editions de I'homme, $2)

High Incomes

In smooth ad-agency prose he argues that Bill 8 imposes bureaucratic controls on the medical profession and makes opting out financially un-feasible. "We reject conscription of doctors in a system of state medicine. We are not fighting for privileges, but for

He says the quality of medical care will remain high only if the specialists' conditions are met. The specialists want the government to pay them 100 per cent of the fee schedule set by their own federation on July 1, which he admits is among the highest Government statistics show that all Canadian doctors average more than $50,000 in gross annual income, with the figure rising by about 10 per cent each year.

Quebec specialists earn 30 per cent more than the family doctors and control most admissions of hospital patients.

This class system inside the province's medical profession pushes the income of many specialists above the $100,000 mark. However, about 25 per cent of doctors' incomes go out in expenses.

Robillard defends these high incomes at the taxpayers' expense on the grounds that a specialist concentrates his lifetime earnings in a period of only 20 or 30 years. Until he gets his specialist's certifi-cate, usually at the age of 35, the aspiring physician must struggle for years on starvation salaries as an intern and resident.

A doctor's earnings fall off after he turns 55 because he cannot maintain the hectic pace and because younger physicians tend to refer their cases to men in their own age group.

The specialists want the right to opt out of the Quebec medicare plan without loss of any benefits to their patients. This means an opted-out doctor can evade the government regulations, collect full benefits from the medicare board, then bill patients or their private insurance firms for extra payments.

The national medicare pro gram was designed to eliminate doctors' bills for low-income families, but many people still pay doctors' bills on top of their medicare premiums or taxes.

The Castonguay commission report, rushed into print by the government, replies to the Robillard paperback with a 1,000-page indictment of the traditional concept of medicine.

The four-volume document says high-fee specialists and high-cost general hospitals gobble up tax funds at a staggering rate, without even providing adequate health

Small Cliques

It says hospital insurance costs soar 15 to 20 per cent each year largely because most hospitals are controlled by small cliques of specialists who ignore government policies and the public inter-

"The fee-for-service system provides a direct stimulus to increase the volume of a medical services - particularly the most complex and the most remunerative - to the detriment of the actual time devoted to the patient himself."

Entitled simply La Sante the report finds that although Montreal is one of the most advanced medical centres in the world. Quebec as a whole suffers from poor health standards.

The infant mortality rate of 25.3 per 100,000 compares unfavorably with 20.2 in Ontario and 12.6 in Sweden. The Quebec cancer and heart death rates and the incidence of tuberculosis are all higher than the Ontario figures.

The commission says that bout one-third of the six do not have medical insurance coverage of any kind.

The private plans have more holes than Swiss cheese. Many people end up on unemployment or welfare rolls simply because they cannot afford to get decent health care.

The recommendations add up to a whole new philosophy of health services:

- Gradual elimination of fees for each medical act, in favor of negotiated salaries or British-style payments for each half-day work session.
- Relpacement of the public community clinics staffed by integrated teams of health professionals.
- Removal of hospitals the control of closed medical boards, in favor of regional health commissions representing the public.
- Integration of medical and nursing schools into the college-university system to produce more graduates, and payment of higher salaries to interns and residents and nurses to eliminate "slave to eliminate labor" in hospitals.

BOURASSA

Castonguay does not intend to raise these proposals in the current negotiations over medicare, but his report is bound to stiffen the specialists' resistance.

The Quebec College of Physicians and Surgeons, the profession's licencing body, estimates that about 35 per cent of the 8,000 physicians in the province already depend in part or in whole on salaries. These salaried doctors include public health officers, coroners, hospital staff members, university lecturers and industrial doctors.

'Socialist Plot'

Robillard draws a salary from his hospital, but he sees even the fee-system medicare legislation as a dangerous Socialistic plot to turn doctors into salaried civil servants. In his book, he harshly criticizes the British public health system, which he observed as an intern at a London hospital in the mid-Fifties.

The rivalry between the two men dates back to 1965, when Premier Jean Lesage named Castonguay as chairman of a civil service task force assigned to prepare the admin istrative machinery for medicare. Dr. Robillard immediately founded his federation of specialists, grouping to-gether 22 specialty associa-tions to fight the introduction of a universal program.

To avoid a noisy battle with doctors on the eve of the 1966 election, the Liberals postponed universal insurance and limited themselves to a "needy-welfare" plan for the recipients. All doctors wel-comed this scheme, since it wiped out most of their baddebt cases.

November, 1966, the In new Union Nationale government set up an eight-man royal commission on health welfare services, with Castonguay as the chairman and chief author. His col-leagues included two doctors, a health services administra-

'Cease to Be Free'

At the commission's public hearings, most medical groups endorsed universal lard turned up with a brief in favor of Government sub-sidies for private insurance companies.

"The doctor ceases to be a free man when the state becomes his only possible source of income," the brief said. "Medicine ceases to be a liberal profession when the government can control methods of practice through The Castonguay commission recommended a compulsory plan financed by a supplementary income tax of .8 per cent in August, 1967. The late Premier Daniel Johnson ventually rejected the report in the face of protests from specialists and financial bat-ties with Ottawa.

Robillard put heavy pres-sure on the Government by calling a three-month strike by the province's 200 radiologists, ostensibly over a complex fee dispute, The Saskatchewan doctors' strike attracted for more attention. but it lasted only three weeks

To step up the pressure, the entire membership of the federation of specialists withdrew from the "needycare" plan from August, 1967, to the following April. The government finally caved in, awarding the specialists considerably higher fees for treating welfare cases and even making retroactive payments for services performed during the eight-month dispute. To appease the radiologists, the government also cancelled plans to provide free X-rays under the hospital insurance plan. All this was in a secret agreement that leaked out in dribbles over several months.

Stiff Resistance

The Union Nationale announced in the spring of 1969 that it would introduce a universal medicare plan based on the 1967 Castonguay report, but the specialists again put up stiff resistance and the federal Government refused to refund the $200-million "social development" taxes collected in Quebec. (The province still hopes to get this money back.)

Castonguay took over as Health Minister after the April 29 election, with most of his work with the royal commission completed. He piloted his revised medicare bill out of the National Assembly on July 10 and tabled another report by his commission calling for a reorganization of closed professional corporations.

Legislation based on this report will be introduced at the Assembly's fall session.

It will unify supervision of a mass of bickering profession add representatives of public on the boards and ead discrimination against immigrant professionals. Robillard probably will not ke that bill either.

THIS IS SOUTHEAST ASIA-6

The Smuggling Business Makes Strange Partners

As hallowed by history as corruption, the diligent practice of piracy and smuggling on a grand scale is also part of the pattern of politics in South-East Asia. Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew told a slightly surprised reporter in Singapore that perhaps the most useful role the United States Seventh Fleet could play after British forces had withdrawn from the area would be to check the growing piracy in the Straits of Malacca. This occupation, regarded as reprehensible in the eamish West, had respectable origins in Malayan waters as a form of systematic taxation. Henchmen of the local rajahs boarded ships when they sailed into the river estuaries bound for markets upstream, and exacted a toll from them. Malacca itself — one-time powerful Venice of the East — held the gorgeous West in fee by forcing ships to put in and pay in coin or cargo for the right to proceed further, while great war fleets of Muslim rovers, proud of their profession and sanctified by their persecution of the infidel, hovered in wait for them in the South China Sea.

Things are not what they were, and the modern Malay, Thai or Chinese pirates make do with modest enough little squadrons. But they operate in fast launches armed with machine-guns or junks fitted with a row of powerful outboard motors, and hijacking smugglers or terrorising and robbing fishing fleets are routine activi-

In the uneasy waters that lie between Borneo and the Philippines, cut-throat raids on coastal towns are one of the hazards of living. In mid-1968 four boatloads of pirates armed with high-powered weapons assaulted Basilan City in the Southern Philippines and fought a pitched battle with troops and police until helicopters flew in army reinforcements. This was no isolated instance, and Lee Kuan Yew's concern was quite natural. For Royal Navy minesweepers working with RAF patrols have in recent veers crimled flottlikes of marguders. In the uneasy waters that lie between Borneo and the have in recent years crippled flotillas of marauders infesting the notorious Sulu Sea.

Filipino "cigarette boats" — long-dainty fingers of open craft — skim over the razor-edged coral at 35 to 40 knots, leaving any revenue cutter or armed hijacker to feel its way gingerly around the hazard. Slipping into the small sun-baked ports of Sabah, the Malaysian State in North Borneo, Filipinos can cram 350 cases each containing 10,000 "blue seal" American cigarettes into one of these, and set off safely again across the 800 miles of sea to Manila. Their purchases are not illegal in Sabah, and their re-entry into the Philippines is made as smooth as a welloiled palm. In this elegant fashion, 90 million cigarettes may be smuggled into the republic every month. Until recently Malaysia made $3 million a year out of the legal "shipping tax" on all forms of exported contraband, while

Manila lost more than $100 million in annual revenue. The reluctant Malaysians were persuaded to forgo their profit and sign an anti-smuggling agreement with the Philippines in a spirit of good will. However, this good will, like all spirit, quickly evaporated when exposed to the elements, and by 1969 the slim cigarette boats were back in Sabah's harbours.

"smoking saloons" of South-East Asia range from utility accommodation with wooden benches for trishaw drivers and coolies to the usual plush tourist traps, but ask in any of these where the opium has come from, and the reply will be "Yunnan."

Yunnan is the mountainous southwestern province China whose Government in Peking, filled w sanctimonious ideological scruples, joins North Korea and North Vietnam in refusing to give any details about national production of the raw material of oblivion to the "imperialist" United Nations Opium Board.

But "Yunnan," like "Cognac," has become a loose generic term. It applies to the opium not only of China, but also of the other countries whose high frontiers but also of the other countries whose high fronters converge in the same remote region of tossed hills and lush valleys — the Shan States of Burma, the northern borderlands of Thailand, the western limits of Laos — where the absurdly-named "Garden Poppy" flourishes and multiplies.

In North Thailand the commerce is organized by remnants of the Nationalist Chinese army which were forced out of Yunnan when Mao's men overran the province in 1950. While Peking and Taipeh indulge their common talent for mutual mudslinging, the growers of Communist Yunnan and the former diehards of President Chiang Kai-shek co-operate — if at arm's length — in a profitable business venture.

The narcotics seep down to Bangkok and from there out into the world — in the tires of cars, in sacks of fertilizer, even embedded in the flesh of specially branded cattle. Some pass through Rangoon, or are smuggled overland to Singapore.

For a long time an enterprising group of French pilots ran a transport service affectionately known as Air Opium, dropping their cargo at selected points outside Saigon or parachuting it into the Gulf of Thailand to be picked up by waiting ships.

But if minds and movements in modern South-East Asia must be seen through filters that bring out the gaudy threads of gold and graft, piracy and papaver somniferum in the geopolitical design, they must also be observed through the other influences that color them, from philosophy to superstition. Although he said it is not official Canadian policy to oppose Britain's entering the market, he said Canada is worried about the effect on Canadian trade of an expanded community that already has preferential trading agreements with its neighbors.

Sharp spoke with Sir Alec after talks with representatives of three other countries and after giving a speech in the General Assembly.

The speech dealt primarily with Canada's campaign for a renewed and more effective UN, especially promoting Canada's initiative to improve organization and procedures.

CHINA NOT MENTIONED

There was no mention of China which surprised many observers because of recent re-ports circulating here that Ottawa and Peking were on the verge of agreement on mutual diplomatic recognition.

Sir Alec had advocated Peking's membership in the UN, joining Maurice Schumann, the French foreign minister, in a

Rumors Sweeping Kent State

KENT Ohio (AP) - Report ranging from FBI agents posing as students to plans by dissidents to start trouble circulated on the Kent State University campus as the school prepared to begin the fall term Monday

"I do not know of any FBI agents on campus as students,' university President Robert I White said at a news conference

He added he would not be aware of the presence of agents unless they identified themselves to school officials. Campus Police Chief Donald Schwartzmiller said it was ru-mored that radical students would try to close the school by Oct. 16. Nobody knew why that should be a target date, he said. Kent State, scene of a May 4 onfrontation with Ohio Naconfrontation tional Guard troops that left four students dead, continued preparations to resume classes under tight security. Six bomb threats have been received since Sept. 16.

ancouver Doctor Jailed, Fined for Abortio

VANCOUVER (CP) - Dr. Robert Makaroff of Vancouver who admitted to procuring hundreds of abortions during the past three years, was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $15,000 Thursday.

Dr. Markafoff was given concurrent three-month sentences on each of three charges of attempting to procure abortions. He pleaded guilty to the charges.

He told the court in an earlier appearance that he had earned up to $300,000 in one year and driven himself to the point of exhaustion to meet the demand for aborticate.

The doctor claimed he was techanically guilty but morally right.

VANCOUVER (CP) Electrical power producers are facing a crisis — switch to nuclear power or risk ecological disaster in the world, British Columbia Hydro Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said Thursday. Shrum told a meeting of the Industrial Relations Manage-ment Association of B.C., that demand for electrical power will increase eight times in North America before the end of the century.

To meet this requirement, in the United States alone, 10 million tons of coal will have to be burned every day in thermal reactors, Dr. Shrum

"This cannot be done with-out a very great risk to the environment," he said.

Edmonton has participated in previous Grey Cup parades with a float designated as the city's official representation.

The cost had ranged from a few hundred to about $2,000...

Squeeze Is On

Record Expected

GRANDE PRAIRIE (CP) Northern Alberta Railways says it expects to set a record for grain movement from the Peace River country this crop year, General manager Ken Perry said Thursday the company expects to move 42 million bushels of grain from the area. The previous high was 41 million in 1961-62.

Causeway Set

WINNIPEG (CP) — Con-struction of a causeway link-ing the mainland with Hecla Island on Lake Winnipeg is expected to begin next week, Tourism and Recreation Minister Peter Burtniak said Thursday, Burtniak said tender for the project has been awarded to Paul Draun Construction Co. of Fort White, Man., the lowest bidder. The company's bid of $1,166,000 was below the $1.6 million price tag the government initially set for the work,

Financing of the project comes from the fund for regional economic develop-ment with the province pay-ing 40 per cent and the federal government 60 per cent.

Aircrew Gather

WINNIPEG (CP) - As air veterans of two wars and many theatres of conflict began to put it all together again in a giant reunion in a downtown Winnipeg hotel Thursday they walked past displays, models and mock-ups of flying machines they once flew in practice or in combat.

One of the models greeting the nearly 1,200 Commonwealth aircrew veterans as they meet for a highly-informal reunion, is a spaceage design that planners hope can be turned from a cardboard paste-up to a poured-concrete memorial to Ca-nadian flying prowess,

Show Cancelled

EDMONTON (CP) - Oh! Calcutta, the off-again, on again, take-it-off musical, is off again. Promoters who planned to include Edmonton in a closed-circuit television showing of the rock musical that features nude scenes said Thursday it is cancelled. Microwave transmission problems that would have limited the television showing to Toronto and Edmonton, cutting out Montreal, Ottawa, Winnipeg and Vanuouver, were given as the reason.

CALGARY (CP) - Although hunting pumps more than $25 million into the Alberta economy earh year, wildlife and wilderness lands have greater value, says Dr. Stuart B. Smith, provincial

Motorcycle Gang Death Goes to Jury

CALGARY (CP) — The trial of 13 men charged with non-capital murder in the slaving of a motorcycle club president went to the jury Thursday afternoon with testimoney from only one defence

The witness was Ronald Lambert Emkeit, 24, of Cal-gary who had been identified earlier as the man who struck Ronald George Hartley, 23-year-old leader of the Outcasts Motorcycle Club with a chain shortly before his death March 7.

Emkeit testified he struck Hartley with a chrome chain he had been wearing as a necklace, but did so "without even thinking" after Hartley had taken a swing at him during a confrontation be-tween the Outcasts and the Grim Reapers motorcycle club on a road southeast of the city.

WEDDING POSTPONED

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) wedding plans have become a bit complex.

Zimmerman told Dane County Judge William L. Buenzli he broke a jewelry store window becau bride-to-be didn't like the ring he had given her and wanted

Buenzli, the judge who was supposed to have married Zimmerman and his bride, sent Zimmerman to jail in

The Weather and You

By Carl Riblet Jr.

If you attend a football game at night the weather can give you cold feet later in the season — even down south where it doesn't freeze very much. The reason has to do with Nighttime fans should go to a football game with full stomachs. Food in the tummy creates body heat. Football rooters should take along topcoats if they live in the milder regions of the country and break out the stadium coats if they live up north where it's really cold on an evening in October. Stadium boots and blankets will keep you warm all during the game or a cold right.

during the game on a cold night.

And it is best, as any doctor will tell you, to bring along a thermos of hot coffee and lay off the liquor. Liquor at a football game may quicken the flow of blood through the skin, but the cold night air causes the heat it generates to dissipate more rapidly. Imbibers of liquor have to drink more to stay warm and too much of the stuff isn't good for anybody.

The automobile—is pride of ownership slowly dying?

Mercedes-Benz examines the relationship of man to his automobile. Offers a few facts, and a conclusion.

WILL most people eventually buy whatever car meets their particular needs most exactly, at the lowest cost per mile?

Undoubtedly, this is a growing trend. As a man's discretionary income grows, he is no longer inclined to throw most of it into a bigger home and a more expensive car - as the burgeoning sales of boats, snowmobiles, skis and travel tickets testify.

Mercedes-Benz will probably not suffer from this trend. Indications are that many Mercedes-Benz owners buy the car not because it is in their price bracket but because it is skilfully engineered and carefully put together. Because it is tasteful and functional.

Eighty-five per cent of Mercedes-Benz owners recently surveyed own watches which cost at least $100. Our conjecture is that this kind of man buys a good watch because he knows it is precisely made and will last a long time. And he feels it is in good taste. Whether other people know it is an expensive watch is irrelevant; so is the fact that a cheaper way of telling the time would be to buy a $10 watch every year.

We believe that many Mercedes-Benz owners fall into this psychological type.

They get satisfaction from feeling an exact response to the merest flick of the wheel, as compared to the vague reaction of normal power steering.

They derive feelings of confidence and serenity from sitting in a seat that fits snugly and offers firm support because orthopedic surgeons helped design it - a seat that feels as though it belongs in a car rather than in a club or a living room.

They gain satisfaction from living with automobile styling that combines function and good taste in timedefying fashion. (The body of the 280S shown above was introduced in 1967: it looks undated today and will, we believe, continue to do so.)

Our conclusion: the purchase of a fine automobile such as the Mercedes-Benz will become passé only then man loses his aesthetic sense.

A program for teens" success "undersuccessfully pioneered last year got under way again this month at Centen-United Church. It's an afterc hool centre, open on Monday and Tuesday afternoons each week, s u p ervision worker, Mrs. Mary Wright. On Mondays the youngsters spend time at indoor projects. Tuesday is for "going out," again with Mrs. Wright, to swim, hike or to play games as weather permits.

"Until last year the empha sis was on the teen-ager," church minister Rev. John Travis told me. "Once that Travis told me. "Once that age group was fairly well looked after we decided some thing was also needed for the under-teens group. The idea of an after-school centre an up. We tried it and found it worked.'

With quiet pride he added that for the opening session this year "from 120 to 150 kids" turned up.

"We are not attempting to bring them into the church nor to persuade their parents to attend. We are merely trying to serve the needs of these youngsters in a constructive way and to give them something to think about and to do.

Centennial United Church chalked up success in other forward-thinking projects since its doors opened as a Methodist gathering place, in the 1890s.

It was the first church to have a radio broadcasting station back in the days of Dr. Clem Davies. "Right up in the round tower," Mr. Travis reminded me.

The church was also the first to co-operate with the Family and Children's Service in opening a day-care centre that is still active there. And the first to give the YM-YWCA a spot to open a drop-in centre for teen-agers. 'We could add that we were the first to organize an annual Prairie Night," Mr. Travis said.

Then he pointed out that Centennial United "could be "could be called the prairie church," becuse so many winter prairie visitors live in motels and auto courts on or near the Gorge Road. "They come to church, like us, and when they do return to Victoria to make permanent homes, they join our congregation."

Today that congregation stands at 800 members "with a b o u t 2,000 more nonmembers who come to us to be married, buried, counselled and for food."

The solid red brick church on the Gorge Road, just off the Hillside-Douglas-Govern-ment roundabout, once stood in the centre of a fully residential area.
Now the "changing face" of area, with its light and family housing 'has led us away from the traditional concept of our work," Mr. Travis explains.

"The whole thinking of the church has changed. Now we are not content with serving merely our congregation, we serve our neighbors too, Today, our facilities are open all who wish to use them."

Program activity is on the increase. "The place is jumping from Monday to Friday and from around seven in the morning, when the day care centre opens, right up to about 10 at night."

As well as the drop-in and after-school centres for teens and under-teens, there are Explorer and Canadian Girls In Training groups, scouts and cubs, a square dance night for teens and another for seniors, a youth club, speakers club and the weekly programs of the church board, senior and junior choirs and the men's club.

* * * In addition to her other community work, Mrs. Wright has organized a small used clothing store and a Wednes-day morning mothers' get-together with baby sitting facilities for those with young children.

The minister, who has no assistant and who says he is 'still old-fashioned enough to like to make home calls," is available at all times for counselling service. He has been at Centennial United Church now for nearly three years after 11 years at the Rundle Memorial United Church in Banff.

In the basement of that church, he organized The Unsquare Cellar, a coffee house drop-in centre for transient teen-agers. It is still "going strong" up there.

When it was first opened everyone expected trouble but has been the years it active, the police have never been called, there has never been a fight, no trouble with drugs, and the place has been kept clean."

* * * In his ministry here Mr. Travis is continuing his interest in youth. He is always exploring new ways of "in-volving the kids . . . the traditional stuff bores them to

At the same time he is reaching out with new and ambitious programs into a surrounding community ("our neighbors") that includes low cost housing and low income families -"not to preach at them but to serve their needs."

boating, the wildlife that visits daily, all combine to provide the living pleasure the city is famous for. The home is not large but there are three bedrooms and a full basement. The truly delightful cottage is furnished. The bridge, the tall trees and a most unusual oak and arbutus add atmosphere that can only be had by years of growth. Not an old property but an unique one with Disneyland flavour. A retired couple or small family would find this a perfect home plus investment. Exclusive.

Tactical Blunder Helps Aussies Postpone Burial at Sea

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — They've postponed the funeral indefinitely

Australia's Gretel II was scheduled to be buried at sea Thursday with a fourth and final triumph by America's In-trepid to nail down the Amer-ica's Cup for another three years.

Instead the Australians rose the dead-and how-to beat their American rivals in a neck-and-neck homestretch race to bring the best-of-7 match to a 3-1 score for the Americans.

It may have been the most exciting finish in all the 119 years of racing for the old trophy. The result of racing luck and a racing mistake of oceanic proportion

Intrepid's Bill Ficker took it like a skipper should. He blamed it on himself. The one taing that isn't done in match racing such as for the cup is for a leading boat not to match every move of a trailing boat. If left uncovered, the trail-ing yacht can go elsewhere gambling on a wind shift or a private puff of wind to sneak by the boat ahead.

That is what happened to Gretel II when she slid past Inrepid a mile from the finish after the U.S. yacht had led all the way around the 24.3-mile transpler course and seemed in the state of the s angular course and seemed a

"We felt in a medium breeze we had as good boat speed as they but did not accelerate as fast after tacking so we would cover them loosely," said it was disastrous.

"Tactical error? It was tactical blunder," said Intrepid's cockpit genius, Steve trepid's c Van Dyck.

Intrepid had a seemingly un-

A windward loosely-covered boat would benefit by such a shift. Coming up the sixth and last leg, Gretel II was a wind-the wind shifted.

Bill Fesq, Gretel II's navigator, had been saying to helms-man Jim Hardy, "We're gradman Jim Hardy, "We're grad-ually losing Intrepid, we're gradually losing Intrepid."

Then his continuous report changed. We're gradually gaining on her. Gaining on her. Do you hear a change in the message?" Onlookers aboard the 150 or so spectator boats had already started saying their good byes to shipmates. A number had checked out of their hotels

But they as well as Hardy were getting Fesq's message. With the wind shifting 20 degrees or more, Gretel II had a better course to the finish than the leeward Intrepid Americans on the spectator craft began jumping up and down and screaming, Ficker flopped on to port tack to get in position to turn again for the buoy end of finish line.

When he realized he would cross astern of Gretel II, he tacked again and was badly headed. Hardy sailed on, tacked until he could lay the line, tacked again and crossed one minute and two seconds ahead.
The crowd loved it.
Gretel II has been a sentimental favorite for many since being disqualified after winning the second race Sunday. Had that race stood instead of being reversed as the result of a colli-sion, the Aussies would be sit-ting with a 2-2 tie instead of still today but Intrepid called for a lay day so the next meeting in what remains a sudden death will be Saturday.

Aussie afterguard may the day off. night it was bottoms up all over town for the boat that doesn't need as many more lives as a cat to take the cup away for the first time. Until the world turned upside down, Thursday's race looked like the twin of Tuesday's In-trepid victory of one minute and 18 seconds, close but convincing.

Ficker had the better start, ahead of Gretel II.

But Gretel II shadowed her like Sherlock Holmes, rarely falling more than four lengths behind. At the second mark, Ficker pulled a surprise out of his bag—a Ted Hood ballooner, which is kind of a mini-spinnaker and set much better than the chute Hardy still carried.

With a tallboy staysall set un-derneath the new reaching sail, Ficker almost doubled his lead at the third mark-from 24 to 40

This is short-order day, and would you believe that it was only three short seasons ago that Joe Crozier was named "coach of the year" for his feats of wizardy with Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League.

Now he hasn't even got a job in hockey. But he is gainfully employed, nonetheless, and not that he needs the money, either. He is the conductor of hockey's version of a talk show on CJOR. No charge for the plug, Joe. But still it must rank as an oddity that Joe got left out in the when expansion took over because in the days of Maple Leafs here, Crozier

Cougars Not Prepared For Shibicky's Terms

Victoria Cougars signed two players and may have lost one Thursday. Manager Eric Bishop announced the signing of goal-tender Darryl Fedorak and winger Jim Lautenslager for the coming B.C. Junior Hockey League battles.

Bishop also disclosed that team and centre Alex Shibicky, Jr., may have reached a parting of the ways.

Shibicky joined Cougars at the tag-end of last season and scored 15 goals in 17 games. The 19-year-old centre seemed certain to win a regular berth until he ran into contract differences.

"We're not even in the same ball park," said Bishop. "He wants a professional's contract to play amateur hockey, but I don't think it would be fair to the rest of

Good Returns At Pedder Bay

By STEWART LANG

While salmon fishermen face the prospect of working just a little bit harder to assure a successful trip around Vancouver Island waters this weekend, trout anglers are waiting for the cooler weather to reflect its presence in fuller creels.

Hottest spot for local fishermen has been Pedder Bay, where limits of winter spring salmon have been coming in during the latter part of this week.

Best catches have been made along the kelp bed, using about eight ounces of weight and between 80 and 100 feet of line. Strip or flashtail behind a dodger seems to be the choicest combination at any part of the day.

Coho returns have dropped off in Pedder but seem to be on the increase well offshore from Beechey Head for those using up to a pound of weight.

"Not too good" was the word on coho fishing from Sooke and the commercial catch of coho in waters west of Sheringham Point were down from last week.

In Saanich Inlet, jack springs and coho have been landed from varying depths in the waters between Willis Point and

Springs up to 18 pounds are also being caught in Tod Inlet and from McCurdy Point to Bamberton. Oak Bay waters have been yielding springs up to 15 pounds and coho up to 13 pounds for fishermen working the areas of Trial Island and Fiddle Reef.

Old brass spoons are proving effective lures for a 50-50 mixed bag of springs and coho off Cherry Point, Burial Island and outside the Cowichan Bay boundary as well as in Sansum

Fishermen around Port Alberni are enjoying the rare privilege of catching tyee right in the town in front of the boathouse as well as in the usual locations down the Alberni

Buzz-bombs and bucktails are pulling in both northern-run coho as well as local gulf fish off the mouth of the Oyster

Further north, the same type of mixed eatch is coming in from the flats in front of Campbell River, near Shelter Point and around Butler Point.

For the trout angler, the weeks ahead should get progressively better. Actively-feeding fish have been caught in Shawnigan Lake,

Wild Deer Lake and in the upper reaches of the Cowichan Nanaimo anglers returning from estuary fishing in the mouths of both Little and Big Qualicum rivers report that sea-

We shall overtake.

Big tough transport trucks tend to look down on small cars. Especially if the small car hasn't got the power to pass him on a two lane highway. Introducing the Toyota Corolla 1200 with "overtake"

We've added 13 more horsepower to an already powerful engine, giving us a grand total of 73. All the power and speed you need to overtake the biggest rigs is there. Top speed is over 90 mph, cruising speed is a smooth 75, and you still get up to 35 miles to the gallon.

The extra horsepower is another good reason why Corolla is considered to be the best all-around small car around. But can the Corolla handle all that power? You bet your bug it can. We realize that a car that can go has to finned brakes and a dual circuit system. Inside it hasn't changed a bit. Everything is standard except the radio and the fully automatic transmission. It comes with reclining bucket seats, a three speed heater, heavy duty 60 amp battery, a 1.3 horsepower starter motor, and white walls. The trunk is spacious for a small car, safety features are everywhere, and the price tag speaks for itself.

If you're beginning to think it's a pretty good car for the money, you're right it is. We could go on to tell you be able to stop. For that, the Corolla has that it's a fun car to drive, but you really should drive it and discover that for yourself. Drive it soon, at your nearest Toyota dealer.

Camper Plant To Close Operations

Caveman Industries Ltd., Central Saanich-based builder of holiday trailers and camper units, is closing down operations in accordance with plans outlined in January.

The company planned to relocate its plant closer to the major market areas, possibly in the Okanagan or at Simcoe,

Reorganization was to be in two phases, the first being the orderly shutdown of local operations, the second establishing new facilities in which existing employees would be offered

President Gordon Pearmain said Caveman is still looking for a new B.C. site and that the Keating property is up for sale. Supervisory staff is being retained and offered jobs in Ontario.

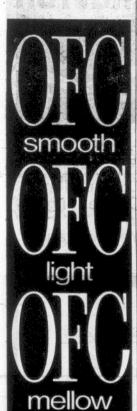

These would likely be brought back to B.C. if a new plant is located by January or February with a view to resuming produc-tion in March, Pearmain sug-

MIDDLE EAST PROBLEMS NOT NEW

Peace Pact Set in 1269 B.C.

A Middle East peace treaty written in 1269 BC has reached the United Nations.

It covers all the essential points: eternal friendship between parties, lasting peace, territorial integrity, non-ag-gression, extradition and mutual help.

It is the oldest written peace treaty to have been discovered.

A replica of the treaty between Hattusillis III, King of the Hittites, and Rameses II, King of the Egyptians, was presented to the UN Thursday by Foreign Minister Ihsan Sabri Caglayangil of Turkey. Appropriately it was hung out-

MacDONALD-DIFFERENT OUTLOOK ON WAR, PEACE

Youngest Ever to Hold Defence Job

OTTAWA (CP) - Less than three years ago, tall, hard-driving Donald Stovel Macdonald was still a humble donald was still a numble parliamentary secretary. Today the Liberal MP for Toronto Rosedale holds the major portfolio of national defence minister.

The promotion of Macdonald, anticipated for weeks, was announced Thursday by Prime Minister Trudeau. At 38, the six-foot-five, moon-faced minister will be the youngest ever to hold the defence job.

He will also be the first defence minister since before the war not to have seen military service— though that of his predecessor, Leo Cadieux, was strictly non-combat. Cadieux was an army information officer.

Donald Macdonald was only 13 years old when the war ended, a circumstance which him a different outlook on questions of war, peace and collective security than preceding defence ministers of an older generation.

Taku Charges Dismissed

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (AP) -A charge against Thomas Aspinall, chief mate of the Alaska ferry -Taku, was dismissed Thursday at a U.S. Coast Guard hursday at a U.S. Coast chard hearing in Ketchikan. Aspinall, who was aboard the Taku when it ran aground near Prince Rupert, B.C., July 29, was charged with failing to correctly determine the vessel's Federal hearing examiner James M. Donahue said he was dismissing the charge against Aspinall because it had not been determined at what point the vessel got off course.

Aspinall reportedly had left the bridge several minutes beore the grounding occurred.

The hearing was a continuation of an inquiry begun in Seattle and recessed Aug. 10. Heard in Seattle was a charge against Cornelius Norden, the Taku's second mate, who was on watch when the vessel went aground. That charge has been taken under advisement.

OTTAWA (CP) - Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of the Science Council of Canada, says a new transportation system using short-takeoff-and-landing aircraft will be a co-operative venture with the United States.

Police Could Have Shot My Boyfriend

Police bullets could have killed three teen-agers whose car was commandeered Thursday by a suspected bank robber as he fled along the Pat Bay Highway.

Saanich police exchanged shots with the gunman while two girls lay on the floor of the car and a boyfriend of one of the girls drove at high speeds towards Sidney.

Deborah Jean Forgie, 16, of 3166 Donald, described the experience Thursday evening in a taped interview on radio station CKDA.

"It was just so awful with all those bullets flying past our heads, and my boyfriend -all they could have done was shoot on the left hand side and they could have got him right in the head or in the back," she said.

Deborah and her friend Alberta Lok, 17, of 551 Whiteside, left Mount View Senior Secondary to go for a ride at lunch time with William Luchaw, 17, of 429

Deborah said bullets fired by the police in pursuit i m m e d iately shattered the Chev's rear window and windshield, "and then a couple of minutes later another bullet came through and just missed my girlfriend's (Alberta Lok) head by about half an inch, and they just about killed her.

She said the gunman had a "bagful of bullets" with him. If Luchaw had been struck, the car would have gone out of control and all its occu-pants could have been killed, Deborah said. The Chev went over an embankment on Land's End Road because it was going too fast to make a turn.

As the car came to a stop the suspect jumped out on one side and the teen-agers got out the other.

The drama started innocently enough at 12:20 p.m. Thursday on Government St. just before the holdup, when a man hired a taxi driven by Duncan Addison, 52, of 180 St. Charles. Addison was told to drive to Johnson between Government and Broad, and wait there while the man completed some business.

NEVER TELL ALL

The Crabber Code

Right from the moment I heard the title of his book, "How to Catch Crabs," I was prepared to hate Cap'n Crabwelle, a sneaky pseudonym if ever I saw one.

The code of the true crab-catcher calls for the total secrecy of a Nazi spy. We are furtive about our hobby. We wouldn't tell our own mother if we found a bay crawling with 18 million crabs. We lie to our oldest, closest, dearest friends. We say, "No, there's nothing at the Spit," when we have bagged our limit there effortlessly. Yet here presumably, was one of us gratuitously blabbing the whole

I pictured Cap'n Crabwelle as a grizzled old sea dog turned sour on life, a traitor to that clandestine breed who'd rather sit down to an orgy of cold, cracked Dungeness Crab than dine at Maxim's with Lena Horne. (Metaphorically

Then I read the book and met the author and, on both counts, I was dead

The booklet, which sells for a dollar, is a useful primer on how to trap crabs, how to cook and clean them, how to tell boy crab from girl crab and other salient information that might be of value to a man who had just arrived from Morden, Manitoba. But the code has not been broken. No, indeed! Cap'n Crabwelle speaks with such masterly evasiveness about exactly where to go that he cannot be faulted. His work, ed, is in the finest contemptible ition of the inscrutable crabtradition of the inscrutable crab-catchers of the western world whose philosophy is simply, "Every one they get is one less for me."

The man behind the pseudonym is no grizzled sea dog, either, but an urbane, 45-year-old businessman, inventor, engineer, publisher and the creator of Victoria's Undersea Gardens, Charlie White, by name, who may be the only member of our breed who packs his traps about in the trunk of a Cadillac. (Crab-lovers are, more often, abject failures in of a Cadinac. Crawlets are into the Dungeness, or Cancer Magister, which may easily become an obsession.)

or Cancer Magister, which may easily become an obsession.)
What surprised and alarmed me in our conversation was Charlie's revelation that our exclusive ranks are no longer exclusive. He, himself, no more than a dozen years ago, invented and marketed a trap with a truly spectacular lack of success. Yet today some 4,500 are retailed annually on Vancouver Island alone. The booklet, itself, has so far sold a whopping 1,500 copies here in Victoria.

It appears, too, that the revelation has finally sunk through that we live in the very heartland of some of the world's finest crab country.

With commendable caution, Cap'n Crabwelle notes that the waters off Sooke, Esquimalt, Cordova Bay, James Island,

sidney and Cowichan are teeming with that most succulent of seafoods. Only last week, in one three-hour "set" of three traps "in the vicinity of Sidney Island" Charlie netted no fewer than 72 legal-sized Dungeness, 66 of which, though over the required six-and-a-half inch measurement, had to be prieved because the limit is six per person per day.

"Vicinity of Sidney Island" is as precise as any true crablover will come to pin-pointing a location. I was astonished

For one thing, contrary to popular myths, crabs are not scavengers and do not go for rotten bait. Above all, they prefer salmon eggs, clams or fresh fish. Another tip: Get yourself a circular trap, rather than a square one, because crabs, being crabs, have no end of trouble making a right-

Wallace also received approval for a resolution calling on the provincial government to endorse the principle that all hospitals be operated by non-profit agencies.

This, in effect, would mean the eventual end of private hospitals which cater to elderly patients. Wallace said he can't accept the view that free enterprise has any place in a form of hospital care which in many cases exhausts

If university populations could be reduced to those who actually stand to benefit from what a university can offer. the saving in money, man-hours, frustration and heartache would be immense. In some future age of reason — one in which the degree is no longer equated to status and earning-power — we may get around to accepting that fact.

Meanwhile, the chief sign that a nealthier attitude may be shaping is the two-year college. It would be unfair to term this useful institution a compromise between educa tion and job training. It offers both, and would be useful

Though no deal has been concluded, Hollywood is also interested in that job.

As an after-thought, Covin told me when last we met that he expects to sign a contract for two more books, synopses of which have been approved by his publishers. This is an awesome score, and all the more so because it has been shoehorned into less

ON A SEPTEMBER DAY in 1954, famed British road racer John Cobb attempted to set a water speed record. On that same day, Cobb autumn weather. Cobb's jetpowered "Crusader" achieved speed clocked at 200 miles an hour. Seconds later, it leaped into the air, crashed down, and battered itself to pieces.

It's a theory to be con-sidered with reservations, photographic evidence or no. The only man who might have confirmed or denied it is John Cobb himself, and he didn't survive to tell the tale.

Sugared Doily Powdery

Dear May

Some weeks ago you gave a recipe for starching crochet doilies. Unfortunately I have mislaid my copy and I was wondering if you could repeat the instructions in your column. — Mrs. J. S., Victoria, B.C.

I have had several letters from readers on this subject, asking whether they should use sugar or starch. One reader who uses sugar writes, "When it is dry, it's white and powdery looking," and I am afraid that sugar does give this appearance. I know several women who do use sugar successfully, but I think that starch is best myself.

If the piece of crochet has been laundered. dry it thoroughly before starching.

This is my recipe for heavy starch: Mix half a cup of starch with half a cup of cold water. Stir until completely dissolved. Add two quarts of boiling water and cook slowly, stirring constantly until the mixture becomes transparent. Keep covered until cool.

I reccommend this heavy starch for very ruffled doilies, baskets and other crochet ornaments.

For a lighter starch, make the same as the heavy starch. but add three quarts of boiling water instead of two.

To launder crochet doilies and place mats, simply squeeze gently in warm soapy water several times, until all the soil is removed. Rinse thoroughly in warm water clean towel to dry.

This week's pattern offer features unisex matchmates. Instructions are given for two lengths of vests, ladies bust sizes 34 to 36 and men, 38 to 30), both mini and midi skirts, scarves and berets including the latest style in a peaked cap. All this is on one leaflet and all are crocheted

Pickle-Free Solutions to Green Tomatoes

Green tomatoes have been a problem to gardeners since they were first grown in quantity on the North American continent in the early 1800's. Previous to that period no mention of tomatoes occurs in the recipes which have come to my notice.

It was several years after record shows an unsuccessful attempt was made to introduce them as early as 1596.

Many ways have been devised of dealing with tomatoes which are left green on the vines when cool nights

Another tip would be to be sure you are not using the feed plate that you use when you are sewing with the zigzag stitch. Again, there is too mcuh play and you will find if you use the plate that only has a small hole for the straight stitching, it will work much more beautifully. Be sure you have a new sewing machine needle that is not blunt, or use one of the new ballpoint needles that are especially designed for knits. Green tomatoes may be used in a limited way sliced thick and cooked gently for a few minutes with bacon then served for breakfast. Or the bacon and tomatoes are put on top of a vegetable and brown rice casserole for baking in the oven.

Many schemes are used to ripen green tomatoes after cool weather makes further outdoor ripening impossible.

As long as days are sunny and warm, leave the fruit on the plants. But the nights which follow these sunny days will be frosty in lower lying areas, so put double sacking over the plants at night to keep off several degrees of air. The fruit continue growing and ripen-ing, and the flavor improves with every day. Cardboard cartons are another means of retaining a little warmth at night.

Discrimination - that's what I call it!

It's gross, unjustifiable, un-e onstitutional discrimination against women. Besides, "it's not fair!

I mean to say, we don't want to die a miserable death from lung cancer any more than the men do. Yet they have their cake and eat it too. and we can't. Those crazy social customs — established by men and condoned by en — are denying women the right to live and smoke. Look at it thiis way. When a man smokes a pack of clagarettes a day, he is in for puble. He is 10 times more likely to die of lung cancer than his friend who doesn't smoke. He's loading the dice against himself for a coro-nary, for bronchitis, for stop smoking cigarrettes and switch to a pipe or a cigar. From the statistics available. don't seem to undermine his health.

He can puff away on his beastly briar, or chew up to five fat cigars a day without detriment of his health. But can women? Oh, no!

We have to remain sane on our own diet of cigarettes, or suffer the agonies of with-drawal with a stoical smile. WE're not allowed an occa sional stogey, or a pipe full of our favorite English blend, to calm our nerves during coffee break or at the coffee clutch in suburbia. Women frown on it because men frown on it because their mothers would have frowned on it. In short, we female smokers can either take our chances of dying a premature death, induced by eigarette smoking, or live as neurotics, twitching with desire for just one more fag.

Change the Mores

The answer, of course, lies in ourselves. We have to change the national mores. have to change, the customs so that we, too, can puff a cheroot delicately in public, or pull a pipe and tobacco pouch from our purse in any social situation.

What we need are the tools for the vice. We can't go round with a dirty old briar clamped between our teeth. It would look too disgustingly

Why doesn't someone design for women a delicate, floral bowl in china, or one with classical figures in Wedgewood blue and white, We could pull out our rhine-tone pouch, load up with the men, puff away serenly, and still look feminine.

Which brings up another matter. Perhaps a female V.I.P. might be persuaded to popularize the habit on TV. The girls on Front Page

But what about Patricia Moore, Kathleen Spears or Maurene Reagor?

Ever since the first oil well was drilled near Titusville, Pa., in 1859, men have made history in that industry. It is for brawn, and brains but seldom has the attribute synonymous with femininity — beauty — been thought of as an additional trait. Sun Oil Co. at Tulsa has three women on its "field" payroll who win praise from their male counterparts for their pioneering ways.

Mrs. Reagor and Miss Reagor Sears are chemists. Mrs. Moore is a process engineer. All jobs normally carried out

Miss Sears, a 1967 Texas Technological University graduate, is the only one neither engaged nor married.

She said she chose chemistry as a major because she was originally a pre-med major and, when she wanted chemistry was the easiest alternative.

She was encouraged by her father, himself a petroleum Mrs. Reagor is combining careers as a housewife, mother and chemist. Her husband is a fifth grade school teacher. Her children range in age from six months to three years. "I don't know how I do it,"

A Widow's Wiles

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a man in my sixties who should know the score, but hear I am about to be taken. Please don't laugh.

After a long illness, my beloved wife of more than 40 years passed on to her reward, and after she had been gone only a few months, I was besieged by all the stray widows and old maids

The first one to knock on door was a very proper widow from my church. She brough me a daily parade of casseroles, cakes, cookies, etc. So when she asked me to chauffeur her to her cousin's funeral 200 miles away, I gladly agreed in order to reciprocate for her kindness to me. She said her car was in the shop, Since she intended to remain a few days, I arranged to stay with an old friend nearby. All was perfectly proper.

Well, last Sunday, she waited for me after church and insisted we talk privately. She had tears in her eyes, so I sat in her car (which I later learned had never been in the shop) and she told me that her neighbors had seen her getting into my car with her suitcase, and they noted that she had been gone for several days, and her reputation would be ruined if I didn't marry her!

Abby, she is a kind old soul, but she is about the last woman I would care to marry if I had marriage in mind, which I do not.

I don't want to damage her reputation, but I certainly don't want marriage with her How do I get out of this without being misunderstood? Trapped In Ohio

DEAR TRAPPED: You just pat her on the hand and say, 'Madame, the evil minds and the clacking tongues of busy-bodies shall not decide my destiny - nor yours. Let us see no more of each other from this day on, and prove the rascals wrong!" Then run

DEAR ABBY: A while back you had a letter from a wife whose husband never called her when he knew he had to work late. His excuse: "I

Well, I don't blame him. I wouldn't want my husband to appear henpecked either, but here is how one smart man solved that problem:

He said, "If a man says, 'I have to call my wife,' he gives the impression that he's henpecked, and if he doesn't report into his wife she will chew him out when he gets home. But if he says, 'I want to call my wife,' that makes him look like he is the boss, and he does only what he wants to do."

Puts a whole different light on it, doesn't it? Gabby DEAR GABBY: Yup. And thanks for enlightening a lot of men who could use it.

DEAR ABBY: I just turned 20 and I thought free love was okay. I got a venereal disease twice and it cost me my right to bear children the last time, because I had to have a hysterectomy. Some price pay for being the most popular girl around.

The guys will tell you there is nothing wrong with them and then you find out too late there was. I suppose some guys don't know they have a disease, but any guy who goes from strange girl to strange girl should know there is a chance he is infected.

I just wish I could tell every girl what a foolish chance she takes when she acts like I did. There would lot more virgins. I started at age 14.

I sure wish my parents would have listened to me when I asked questions about

The breakdown has not affected the productivity of the mill, Reynolds said, because they are using a second drying machine they were planning to leave idle. He expects the damaged machine to be repaired today,

Harmac Crews Back on Job

NANAIMO (CP) — Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada returned to work Thursday afternoon at MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac pulp mill, and the company announced the recall of 1,700 loggers laid off several weeks ago when there were no facilities to process the logs.

The 1,100 PPWC members had accepted a new three-year contract giving them a 22.5 per cent wage increase, but refused to take down picket lines until local differences were settled.

"The biggest issue was the recalling of workers according to seniority and job protection for the employees who are out of town," said PPWC president Fred Mullin.

MacMillan Bloedel said it

Fred Mullin.

MacMillan Bloedel said it would g i ve the out-of-town employees reasonable time to return to work and consider seniority when recalling the employees who have been out of town.

But the company said the main issue behind the one-day delay in going back to work was a dispute over the cement lining.

"I HAVE TO CHECK" SAYS COOL TELLER

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A would-be robber handed bank teller Carol Head two notes demanding $4,000. The man had a gun and ordered her not to scream until 10 minutes after he had left.

Mrs. Head said, "I'll have to check the signature on and left the window.

The man stood there a minute. Then, as Mrs. Head asked another employee to phone police, it dawned on him that this wasn't normal bank robbery procedure.

He fled from the bank and disappeared into the crowd in

Tonight's Top Television Shows

(season's premiere) Tom opens his third season with a powerhouse cast. Composer Burt Bacharach and actress Anne Bancroft, his special guests, and the Ace Trucking Company, his regular comedy backers, spend a spirited hour with Welshman Jones, filled with assorted highlights. For example, Anne Bancroft helps Tom sing Burt Bacharach's famous tune, "Raindrops Keep Fallin' On My Head;" Tom joins Burt for four of the latter's hits, "The Look of Love," "Any Day Now," "What the World Needs Now," and "April Fools;" Anne reads a satirical poem by Judith Viorst called "A Women's Liberation Movement Woman;" and the Ace Trucking Company is represented for active poem. responsible for skits about "Clean Movie" and "The Border.

THE BRADY BUNCH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 4 (season's premiere) "The Dropout." At the start of their second season, parents Florence Henderson and Robert Reed are coping nicely with their broad of six in this harmless, homey situation comedy. Tonight's guest is former baseball pitcher Don Drysdale, who is indirectly responsible for Greg Brady's day-dreams about becoming a pitcher worthy of the Hall of Fame.

NANNY AND THE PROFESSOR. 8 p.m., Channel 4 (season's premiere) "The Human Element." "It looks as if Nanny's sputtering Model A automobile is going to get more mileage (pun intended) during the second season. The opening episode finds Nanny's car pitted against a very fancy antique auto in an impromptu race. You don't have to share Nanny's gift of prophecy know who wins the race.

HEADMASTER. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7, 12. Schoolmaster Andy Griffith is challenged by a teacher instead of by students this week in an outing that's rather like an essay. A cute English teacher in a revealing mini-skirt rebels when Andy politely requests her to appear in less distracting apparel. Teacher Maureen Arthur is an eyeful, willing to do battle, and she startles Andy with her rebuttal. Griffith seems a bit more at home in his second show, but the format of the series hasn't jelled as yet,

THE NAME OF THE GAME. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "A Love Remember." Good show if you'll stay with it through the first half hour. At his college reunion, Glenn (Gene Barry) meets a lovely, mysterious girl who claims to be part of his past. To compound the mystery, he later learns that the lady has apparently been dead for over 25 years. It's all highly contrived; but absorbing and well done, except for the overdrawn college

TOMMY HUNTER. 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Big Tom is back for the new season, bigger than ever. His show has been expanded to a full hour and the first one offers singers Anne Murray and Gene MacLellan as guests. Anne sings Rain and Snowbird, Gene sings The Call, Tommy sings Stop the World and the Allan Sisters offer Proud Mary.

THAT GIRL, 9 p.m., Channel 4 (season's premiere) "Counter Proposal." It took five seasons but "that girl" finally gets engaged. Marlo Thomas and Ted Bessell manage with charm to convey all the tension and joy that accompanies getting engaged and the scene in which Marlo actually receives the ring is beautifully handled. Naturally, there are extenuating circumstances involving the ring, and guest Ronnie Schell gets into the act for a lot of laughs. The female audience will note that Marlo includes both midis and minis in her wardrobe for the new LOVE, AMERICAN STYLE, 9:30 p.m., Channel 4 (season's premier). This comedy series of short plays is cut to a half hour which may help the pace of the show. Tonight's tales involve a rather mild motel sketch in which Barbara Rush and Harry Morgan share a mutual guilt, cheating on their respective spouses, and look for an excuse to call it off, as well as a silly opus about a young couple and a unique father-in-law.

BRACKEN'S WORLD. 1 p.m., Channel 5. "Murder Off-Camera." For regular fans specifically. Last year, the series couldn't decide whether Kevin Grant's wife was a wonderful woman or a hopeless alcoholic, so tonight the problem is solved by having her murdered in the opening moments of the show. The balance of the episode — solving the crime — is at the quelity level of level solven. quality level of last season's shows.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

The Allergy Foundation of America, in a recent release listed me essential facts about allergies: They say that one out of ry 10 people in the United States, or about 22 million persons, suffer from some sort of allergic disease. Of these 22 million, about 16 million suffer from asthma or hay fever, and six million suffer from other allergic conditions. About five million of the asthmatics are children asthmatics is over $135 million. Domestic shipments of antihistamines, drugs used largely by allergy sufferers, cost about $50 million. But this is only one of the several drugs used to treat allergies. Perhaps a million sufferers of allergies re ceive injection treatments of ragweed pollen hay fever each year, and that costs about $100 million.

Children under 17 years of age lose some 36 million days from school and play, and each year they spend about 13 million days in bed because of allergic troubles. Surveys indicate that one in every five children has a major allergy, yet only one in three of these allergic children receives any medical attntion. Time lost from work by adults with allergic disorders amounts to some 25 million man-days a year, at an annual cost to industry of about $400 million. Some 600,000 workers in the U.S. are victims of occupational skin irritation — like the many men who have a rash on their hands due to the use of some "dope" or varnish or oil in the factory where they work.

Five per cent of U.S. people are said to be allergic just to penicillin, while others are allergic to detergents, cosmetics, plastics and many new drugs. A prominent skin specialist told me that today much of his time is spent treating women who have become allergic to new detergents that they are using.

I was interested to see that allergies ranked seventh among 19 medical reasons for draft rejection. As these statistics show, allergy can be a serious problem, even a crippling one. I have seen many kinds of allergies in my long years in medicine, and in the most extreme case, a lad was mentally crippled due to an allergy to eggs; in another case, a man had to sell his business, a chicken farm, because he was allergic to chicken feathers.

CPAC president John Di Castri said the important thing is to consider community values in planning downtown Victoria's role in the region. He said the "profit has led to shopping motive" centres which have teriorated the region's beauty. This "human shortcoming must also figure into planning, he said.

Victoria Ald. Peter Poller said the real problem was not the autombile, but an in-creasing populationa and an outmoded Municipal Act hamstrings councils taxing powers. He said Greater Victoria Victoria Ald. Hugh Ramsay said one of the main reasons and other municipalities have jumped to take over the bus system is fear of operating losses. "Equally important to what kind of a city we're going to have is how we're going to get it," he said.

Ramsay said that if the regional district eventually decides to take over the bus system, it is going to have to sell the public on the idea of paying for it. Galbraith said he has been to several meetings in the Home gardeners can learn much by observing methods and timing of outdoor plant work done by city and municipal park departments. This week the wide cement urns at Humber Green (where Douglas, Gorge, Hillside and Government meet) were denuded of their pink petunias and yellow

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said States intelligence had noted in the last few months the movement of facilities and equipment into the harbor at Clenfuegos, on the southern shore of Cuha, that could serve as support facilities for

He noted that although Soviet submarines have operated from Cienfuegos in the past there have been no permanent facilities in the harbor for their use.

But in the last few months. he said, Soviet ships have brought in equipment, including barges, that could be used for maintaining a sub base. & This equipment "makes us feel they the Russians may be

It ended at 1:36 a.m. today, in cold weather, on gently-rolling seas, half a mile from Stuart Island on the American side of Haro Strait, 19 miles and 12 hours from where it began.

I was the only newsman aboard the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Richmond when a young, blond man surrendered and climbed aboard, head down, shivering in red shirt and slacks.

He was turned over by skipper Tom Anderson to San Juan County Sheriff Eric Erickson.

RCMP Supt. Jim Nelson left the MP53 Sidney, the police command vessel, and pulled alongside the sloop in the first of three negotiating visits, during each of which he stared down the muzzle of the .45.

SHED VEST

"I told him how the system works in North America these days," Nelson said. "Society is geared now to help people in his position. We weren't going to shoot him. I promised him a fair shake.'

At the gunman's demand, Nelson peeled off his bullet-proof vest. But the hostages weren't to be released.

With Nelson's permission, Deep Cove Marina owner Henry Bird took me to the sloop, where I offered the man with the gun an op-portunity to tell his story in full to me alone if he would release the hostages.

DEMANDS PLANE

"He wants a plane, and a pilot, and full tank of gas." More quiet words from the gunman. "And he wants it here by dark or he says there's going to be trouble."

Back aboard the Sidney.

Back aboard the Sidney, Nelson and Supt. Kelly Irving conferred. They decided against the plane, and moved instead to take out the sailboat — and wait. "It's a difficult decision," said Irving, who had been involved in several hostage cases on land but none on the water.

"We're convinced that if we did supply the plane and pilot, the gunman still would take one of the hostages with him, probably the girl.

'WE'LL WAIT'

"We'd be no further ahead. We'll have to wait, and hope that the talking that's been done to him will make him think. We'll wait all night."

The sailboat moved steadily across Haro Strait as darkness fell, ringed by eight vessels, all at a distance of 1,000 feet. The gunman fired twice at the Sidney when she crept too close.

The skipper of the MP43 established voice contact with the sailboat at 9:30 p.m. and radioed to the command boat that the gunman wanted a small boat to bring cigarettes and coffee.

"Tell him there are no small boats in the area," answered Nelson.

The message was relayed, and the MP43 backed off The cutter Point Richmond joined the police flotilla as it edged into U.S. waters. Irving radioed to get permission to land Canadian police officers on the American islands if the sailboat drifted ashore

SLOOP RINGED

Midnight came, and the police and Coast Guard boats ringed the sloop as it drifted nearer Stuart Island. Skipper George Lewis kept the Sidney directly astern of the sailboat, 1,000 feet back. City Police Detective Lou Trues-dale, a crack shot, stood on the bridge beside Lewis, his scope-mounted .308 Remington rifle in the corner, staring into the radar screen where the sloop showed as a steady blip directly ahead of the

Police officers on all boats were ordered to sleep in shfts.

"It could be a long night," Nelson said. "And if it goes on tomorrow, we'll need fresh men to deal with it." Coffee was made, and half the policemen on the Sidney were ordered to bunks.

NOBODY SLEEPING

There was no coffee on the sailboat, and nobody was Shortly after midnight, the break came, and it was the man with the gun who broke. The radio crackled, "MP53 this is MP43. We have established voice contact with the sailboat. One hostage is to be released. He will be released only to an American vessel. We have been ordered to have an American vessel approach the sailboat. The hostage is Mr. Smith. He will be released in the small boat. All other vessels are to clear the area.

The Sidney pulled alongside the Point Richmond, and Nelson, Irving and I boarded the cutter. The Sidney and others in the flotilla moved well back.

The runabout separated from the sailboat and Smith rowed to the cutter's boarding ladder. He came aboard and was led to the galley.

Smith slumped to a bench. smith slumped to a bench.
"He's serious," he said, his voice

GUARANTEE

Smith said first he thought the gunman would stick to his demand for an aircraft. But he might also go for a "sincere" guarantee that he would be turned over to U.S. authorities if he surrendered now.

"I think he's afraid he would be beaten up by the (Canadian) police for shooting two of them," Smith said.

Nelson and Irving agreed.

"Our concern is for the safety of the hostages, not jurisdiction," Irving said. In any case, the legal point was clear, Nelson said. If the gunman were apprehended in American waters, he would turned over to American authorities. The Sidney and other Canadian vessels cleared the area, and the 88-foot cutter edged toward the sailboat. Smith's voice boomed from the loudhailer. "Can you hear me, Rory?

"He can hear you," came the response. "Rory, I am the only Canadian aboard the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Richmond. I can guarantee you will be dealt with by American authorities.

"Even if one of the Ca-nadian ships out there takes you into custody, it must turn you over to this vessel.

LAWYER PROMISED

There was no answer from the sailboat. The cutter backed away, then closed again.

"It's your only chance. Rory. It's all you can do." The gunman asked what would become of the bag of money he had on board. "I will give your lawyer $6,000 to be used as you see fit. I can raise it tomorrow. If you believe this, throw your guns overboard."

GUNS DROPPED

The gunman demanded that all other vessels in the area move farther back. They did. nove farther back. They did.

Wounded Lay Dying in Street As Shells Wipe Out Hospitals

from Reuters correspondent Ibrahim Noori, which was flown out of Beirut today, gives the first detailed rert of the condition of the casualties in the battle of Amman.

By IBRAHIM NOORI

AMMAN, Jordan (Reuters) "Give me bread, give me ter," groaned Palestinian laborer Ibrahim Salim Mattah as he lay critically ill today with chest wounds in an Amman hospital.

Hit by army selling of Hussein refugee camp—population 45,000—Mattah lay for three days without medical treatment before he was brought into the private hospital with more than 125 other casualties.

Around him in the hospital wards which reeked of blood lay patients who had lost legs or arms or were blinded.

Dr. Saad Maasher, told a group of journalists who were escorted by an army officer to ee the patients this morning. Exhausted doctors and nurses, their white smocks stiff with dried blood, moved through the wards, tending to patients who lay on hospital beds, camp beds and pallets on the floor.

The wounded seemed to be feeble. Many had lost much blood as they lay in their shattered homes for help that sometimes took days to come Ibrahim Mattah, the 29year-old laborer from Hussein camp, told reporters: "I don't know where my wife and daughters are. I don't know whether they are alive or dead."

A young man who refused to give his name said: "At least 80 per cent of the camp was destroyed. I don't think there is a single house in which someone was not either killed or wounded."

Aman Al-Wawi, wounded in the arm, said King Hussein's troops bombarded the camp for three days.

Abdul Halim Daana, 22, a bullet lodged in his shoulder, said that the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the group which hijacked three Western airliners to Jordan earlier this month and held their occupants hostage, was the dominant commando organization in Hussein camp.

Dr. Maasher said that many the people wounded early in the fighting had died be cause they could not be taken to hospitals.

Only three hospitals were still functioning in Amman, he said, and all were overing it increasingly difficult and dangerous to do their work quickly and effectively. NEVER TELL ALL

The Crabber Code

-How, Not Where

By Jack Scott-

Right from the moment I heard the title of his book, "How to Catch Crabs," I was prepared to hate Cap'n Crabwelle, a sneaky pseudonym if ever

The code of the true crab-catcher calls for the total secrecy of a Nazi spy. We are furtive about our hobby. We wouldn't tell our own mother if we found a bay crawling with 18 million crabs. We lie to our oldest, closest, dearest friends. We say, "No, there's nothing at the Spit," when we have bagged our limit there effortlessly. Yet here presumably, the man behind the pseudonym is no grizziet sea tog, either, but an urbane, 45-year-old businessman, inventor, engineer, publisher and the creator of Victoria's Undersea Gardens, Charlie White, by name, who may be the only member of our breed who packs his traps, about in the trunk of a Cadillac. (Crab-lovers are, more often, abject failures in life because of their single-minded pursuit of the Dungeness, or Cancer Magister, which may easily become an obsession.)

What surprised and alarmed me in our conversation was Charlie's revelation that our exclusive ranks are no longer

The drama started innocently enough at 12:20 p.m. Thursday on Government St. just before the holdup, when a man hired a taxi driven by Duncan Addison, 52, of 180 St.

Addison was told to drive to Johnson between Government and Broad, and wait there while the man completed some business.

"It's obvious now that he had this thing well planned," Addison said.

"He told me he had a reservation on the plane, but that he had to make a stop first at the pawnbroker's."

"The driver had just pulled up on the other shide of the street and shouted: 'What are all the cops doing down the street, when my fare jumped into the cab beside me and said: 'Let's get going'.'

For the next 15 of 20 minutes Addison suspected nothing; then, just past the McKenzie-Douglas intersection, the suspect motioned him to pass a white unmarked police car.

The cruiser's red light began to flash, and the suspect suddenly fired at it through the rear window of the cab.

Gunman Charged With Kidnap

$6,000 Bail For Suspect

A man calling himself Rory Shane and giving his age as 19 appeared at 10:30 a.m. today in U.S. Federal Court in Seattle and was charged with kidnapping a Vancouver man.

The man was arrested early this morning at the climax of a wild, international land and sea chase that followed the robbery of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce downtown Victoria.

The man, identified by Canadian authorities as William Lawrence Olenik, 26, formerly of Niagara Falls, Ont., was charged with kid-napping Roger Smith of Vancouver. Bail was set at $6,000.

RUSSIAN SUB BASE IN CUBA?

WASHINGTON (AP) defence department said today it has firm indications Soviet Union may be establishing a permanent sub-marine base in Cuba.

Desperate Flight Ends On Cold, Rolling Sea

By DOUG MacRAE

It ended at 1:36 a.m. today, in cold weather, on gently-rolling seas, half a mile from Stuart Island on the American side of Haro Strait, 19 miles and 12 hours from where it began.

I was the only newsman near the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Point Richmond when a young, blond man surrendered and climbed aboard, head down, shivering in red shirt and slacks.

He was turned over by skipper Tom Anderson to San Juan County Sheriff Eric Erickson.

Three hostages, two men and a woman, sat in the galley of the cutter, cold, shaken and relieved.

The cutter's crew stood chill, understated end to 12 hours of shootings high-speed car chases and hours of police stalking and hostage terror that had people across North America following every step. BLOODLESS END

But the end came with no more bloodshed — and that was the aim every man in the vast armada mustered to play a part in it. At about 1 p.m. Thursday a man carrying a pistol, a bandolier of ammunition slung his shoulder, walked the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Government and Yates
